STD : IX GEOGRAPHY
UNIT : 4

Human Resources for National Development

Factors of production and their Rewards

Factors of production	Rewards
Land	Rent
Labour	Wages
Capital	Interest
Entrepreneurship	Profit

- All the natural resources, like soil and water are part of the Earth.
- Labour encompasses all intellectual or physical efforts done by people for reward.
- All man-made resources that aid the production process are capital.
- Entrepreneurship (Organisation) is the process of combining land, capital and labour appropriately to make production possible.

Evolution of money

Barter Products - Gold - Metal coins - Paper money - Plastic cards - Electronic money

Barter System

The system that the goods were exchanged for goods. This is known as Barter System.

Disadvantages of the Barter System:-

1. Difficulty in determining the price of goods.
2. Lack of availability of goods to meet everyone's needs.
3. Difficulty in exchanging goods.
4. Unable to obtain desired goods.

Human Resource

- Human Resources denotes people who can work and can be used in the production process.
- Productivity is the critical component in determining the quality of human resources.

Productivity

- Productivity is the ability of each factor of production to produce goods and services.

Factors influencing human resources

- Size of Population.
- Composition or Structure of Population.
- Skills of the population.

Population structure

- The population structure of a country consists of people belonging to different age groups.
- It is not the size of the population but its quality that determines human resources.

Labour Force

- According to the Periodic Labour Force Survey (PLFS) Report published by the Government of India in February 2023, the labour force of the country is the population of 15 years of age and above who are willing and able to work.

Factors that Human resources can be made more efficient

- Higher education
- Proper training
- Healthcare

Human Capital

- Human capital is the economic value of human resources.

Human Capital Formation:

- Human capital formation is the additions made over periods of time to the stock of human capital.
- Examples for forms of Human capital: Farmers, Teachers, Scientists, Engineers and Doctors.

How can we strengthen the human capital?

- Provide better health facilities
- Enable large scale investment in education
- Emphasize skill development
- Create an employee- friendly work environment.

Factors Influencing Human Capital Formation:-

1. Education
2. Health
3. Access to Information
4. Migration
5. Job Training

How education leads to the progress of the country?

- Education improves the ability of individuals.
- Improves the technological knowledge.
- Possible the skill development.
- Helps to secure batter job and income.
- Education improves the standard of living.

Health

- WHO: Health is a state of physical, mental and social well-being.
- People with poor health cannot contribute effectively to the progress of the country.

How does declining health affect individual and national development?

- Decreases productivity
- Refrains from work
- Slows down production
- Medical expense can be increased

What are the health care measures to be taken to increase the productivity of human resources?

1. Strengthen immune systems
2. Give importance to hygiene
3. Ensure availability of nutritious foods
4. Provide better medical facilities
5. Ensure recreation and relaxation

Healthcare Centers work in the public sector:-

1. Health sub-centres
2. Primary health centres
3. Community health centres
4. Taluk hospitals
5. District hospitals
6. Medical colleges

Health care Activities implemented in the Health Sector:-

- Preventive medicine
- Immunization
- Curative medicine
- Access to nutritious food
- Promotion of health literacy
- Supply of clean drinking water
- Sanitation measures

Migration

➢ Migration is the permanent or temporary movement of people from one region to another region.

How does Migration enable human capital formation?

- It causes many changes in the social, economic and cultural spheres.
- It is the responsibility of the Government to observe and understand the regional changes resulting from migration and bear the expenditure to meet the basic needs.
- This helps to form the human capital in the region.

Job Training

➢ How Job Training can help to Human Capital formation ?

- Skill development training is mandatory for getting jobs in certain fields.
- Acquiring job training can help increase productivity, thus enabling high production.
- Job training will bring human capital formation to its peak.

Access to Information

Explain the role of access to information in Human Capital Formation?

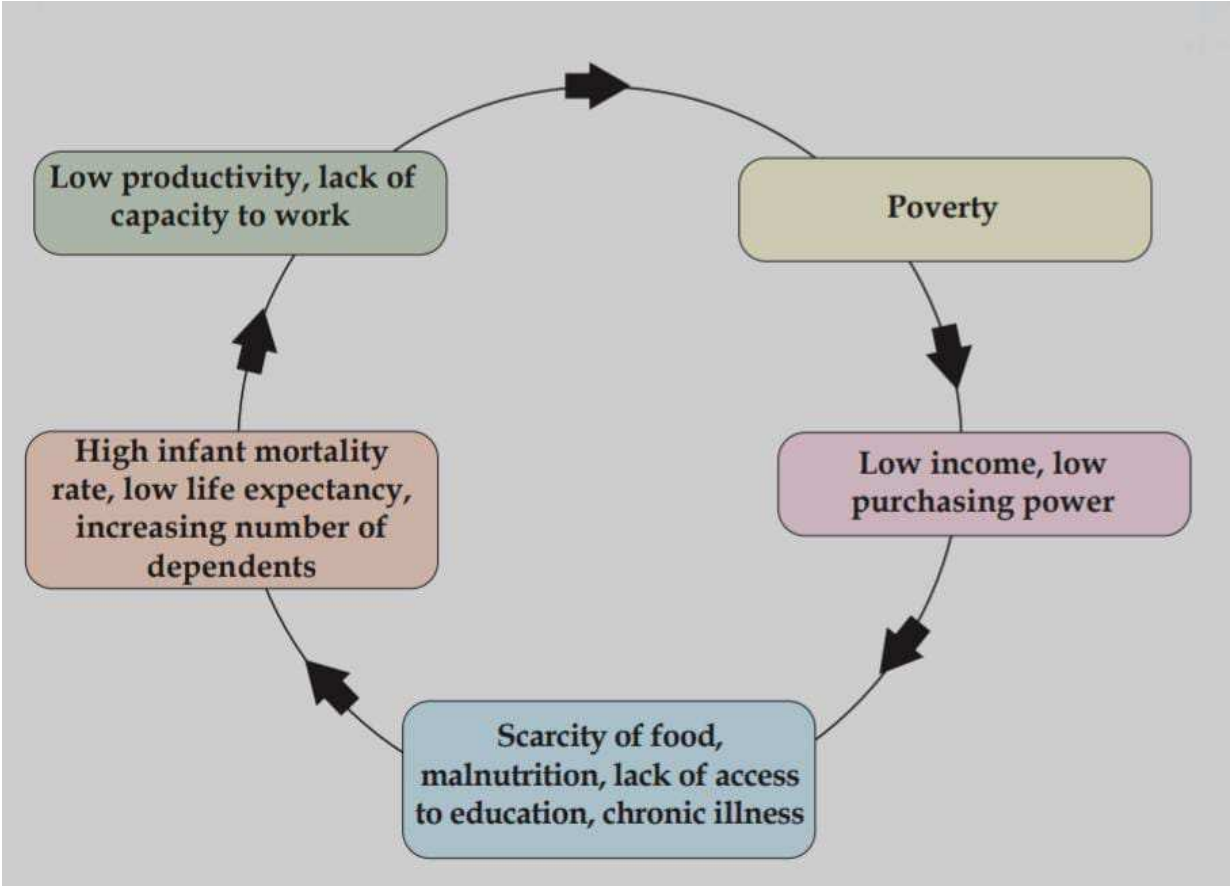

- Services in various sectors such as education, health and employment give impetus to human capital formation.
- Access to information needs to be fostered to help people gather information about the services provided.

Challenges faced by Human Capital Formation

1. Poverty
2. Unemployment

Poverty

- Poverty is the state of not being able to meet even our basic needs.
- The causes and consequences of poverty are interconnected.

Unemployment

- Unemployment is a condition in which a healthy and capable person who is willing to work at the prevailing wage rate, cannot find work.

There are various types of unemployment in the country:-

1. Open unemployment : Willing to work but unemployed.
2. Structural unemployment: Job loss due to the introduction of new technology.
3. Seasonal unemployment: Employment during a particular season and remaining unemployed during the rest of the time.
4. Disguised unemployment: A condition where more than the number of labourers required are employed in production process without any change in total output.

==========

Prepared by,
HAMZA KANNANTHODI
MUHSS OORAKAM
MOB: 9847767121